

Provider network

UnitedHealthcare Vision

There's always a provider in sight.

Neither sole private practice provider networks nor sole retail chain provider networks satisfy everyone. Some people prefer to use the services of a private practice provider, especially if they have a longstanding relationship with a family eye doctor. Others prefer to use the services of a retail chain provider. Retail chain providers allow access to evening and weekend appointments, eliminating lost hours at both work and school. In addition, many retail chain providers have the ability to provide eyewear within 24 hours.

UnitedHealthcare Vision's national network offers the greatest choice and convenience with a diverse network of over 30,000 providers, including both private practice and leading retail chain providers.

UnitedHealthcare Vision partners with more than 100 national retail chains throughout the country. In fact, UnitedHealthcare Vision's network includes more than half of the top 50 retail chains in the country.¹

Although UnitedHealthcare Vision contracts with each of these retail chain providers, not all locations within each retail chain participate in UnitedHealthcare Vision's network.
